

Foundations of Environmental and Sustainability Education

Professor Noah Weeth Feinstein

nfeinstein@wisc.edu

Thursday 3:30-6pm

Curric 975

What is environmental education,
and what does research say about it?

What are the origins and philosophies of nature study, conservation education, and outdoor education?

Are movements such as place-based education and education for sustainability really different?

How do equity and agency matter in environmental education?

Designed for graduate students with a strong interest but relatively little background in educational research, this seminar offers a crash course in environmental education research and theory, pulling in a cross-section of social scientific ideas ranging from behavioral change to social capital and resilience.
